Welcome

LAURA KROETSCH
DIRECTOR, ADELAIDE WRITERS’ WEEK

Welcome to the 2017 program for Adelaide Writers’ Week. It is a thrill to announce the writers who will gather with us under the trees in the Pioneer Women’s Memorial Garden to read, talk and share their stories.

This year the idea of borders runs through the program; the lines of demarcation, both real and imagined, that shape our world. We’ll talk about war and peace, migrants and refugees, marriage and divorce, social engineering, pagans and Christians and how we write about the past.

We will celebrate the very best in contemporary writing, explore popular culture, think afresh about a Queen and “the book”, and consider places as disparate as Cuba, China and Chile. Together we’ll listen to poets, playwrights, novelists, historians, biographers, memoirists, pundits, and other brave souls as we consider the past, the present and the future.

On behalf of the Adelaide Festival I thank the Adelaide Writers’ Week Advisory Committee, the Adelaide Festival staff and the many sponsors and patrons who make this event possible. We also again have Trees for Life to thank for growing the South Australian native plants that sit so well in the Pioneer Women’s Memorial Garden.

I look forward to seeing you all in the garden this March.

WITH SPECIAL THANKS TO JAY WEATHERILL
PREMIER OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

Australia’s first and only free literary festival invites writers and readers from around the world to enjoy lively presentations and spirited panel discussions. In an uncertain world, Writers’ Week is a safe place for difficult but vital conversations – be they about war and peace, reconciliation and forgiveness, or the challenge of growing up in the 21st Century.

Events such as this are also critical to our achieving broader goals, like making Adelaide the heart of a vibrant State and one of the world’s most liveable cities, and ensuring South Australia is a destination of choice for overseas and interstate travellers.

I have every confidence that – for one and all – the 2017 Adelaide Writers’ Week will be fun, stimulating and intellectually nourishing.

JACK SNELLING
MINISTER FOR THE ARTS

Adelaide Writers’ Week seems every year to achieve the unachievable: to make Australia’s leading literary festival, and surely its most loved, even better than before. Director Laura Kroetsch and her team have embraced the values of passion and creativity that drive the culture of the Adelaide Festival.

I am proud of the way Writers’ Week stimulates community involvement, especially for young people, with the fantastic Kids’ Weekend offering something for everyone. It’s also great to see a focus in 2017 on the next generation of writers from Australia and around the world.

I look forward to joining you in the Pioneer Women’s Memorial Garden again in 2017.

JUDY POTTER
CHAIR, ADELAIDE FESTIVAL CORPORATION

The Adelaide Festival is Australia’s pre-eminent multi-arts festival: arts in all their richness, performing, visual, and literary. Adelaide Writers’ Week is an integral part of the Adelaide Festival, and it is a delight to be able to share it with you once more.

Adelaide Writers’ Week, like the wider Festival program, welcomes many visitors from interstate and overseas, both for the quality of the writers who take part and for its award-winning community impact and open access.

We invite you to join us for six days of stories for the whole community.
Writing in The New Yorker James Wood described Elizabeth Harrower’s writing as “witty, desolate, truth-seeking, and complexly polished”. She is today acknowledged as a titan of the post-war era and yet sadly by the end of the last century all of her books were out of print.

Harrower’s writing life began in the 1950s when she left Sydney for London. In quick succession she published three novels, Down in the City, The Long Prospect, and The Catherine Wheel. Her masterpiece The Watch Tower appeared in 1966 and she did not publish again until May 2014 when her “lost” novel In Certain Circles was released by Text Publishing.

After almost 50 years of a silence so profound even some of her friends didn’t know she was a writer, she has returned. In an interview Harrower remarked that she didn’t worry about her books, she knew “they were buried treasure. There they were underground, locked up, secure, and I had total confidence that they wouldn’t disappear”. Admired by her contemporaries, including Patrick White and Christina Stead, Harrower is being read again. All of her books are back in print, and she is enjoying success here in Australia as well as internationally. She is being lauded by a new generation of writers and critics and being read by ever increasing audiences.

It is a great honour to dedicate Adelaide Writers’ Week 2017 to Elizabeth Harrower. She takes her place among past dedicatees Brenda Niall, Robert Dessaix, Margo Lanagan and Christopher Koch.

Adelaide Writers’ Week Advisory Committee
For many years Adelaide Writers’ Week has been held in the precinct of the Pioneer Women’s Memorial Garden. Since 2012 the garden itself has provided a beautiful setting for Adelaide Writers’ Week events.

In 1935, the year prior to South Australia’s Centenary, a Women’s Centenary Council representing 72 organisations raised money to fund a fitting memorial for the pioneer women of the state.

Five members of the council were appointed to form the Pioneer Women’s Memorial Trust. They were set the task of establishing the memorial chosen by the council, a Flying Sister base in Port Augusta, but were persuaded by Reverend John Flynn that a Flying Doctor base in Alice Springs was badly needed and thus the sixth base in Alice Springs was born. Most of the money was used to build the base and the remainder was earmarked for a memorial in Adelaide, thus the Pioneer Women’s Memorial Garden was established on land made available by Adelaide City Council.

The garden was conceived by three people. Elsie Cornish was the landscape gardener; Ola Cohn sculpted Waikerie limestone into the timeless figure, a symbol of pioneer women; and George Dodwell, an astronomer, designed the sundial on the northern side of the statue. A plaque recording the opening of the garden and listing the founding trustees is mounted on the entrance gates. For many years the National Council of Women SA held a ceremony in the garden to pay tribute to the pioneer women of the state.

Adelaide City Council maintains the garden and, alongside the current trustees, is committed to its role in South Australia’s history.

Historical Fiction

It’s been a great year for historical fiction including Armando Lucas Correa’s novel The German Girl. The novel begins in Berlin in 1939 and tells the story of a group of Jewish refugees bound for Cuba – only to be turned back. For an even bleaker version of sea travel try Ian McGuire’s The North Water, a terrifying tale of a 19th century whaler and the corrupt crew aboard. For the landlubber we recommend Hannah Kent’s The Good People, a sinister story set in 19th century Ireland – you won’t know who to trust.

It’s time to start your Adelaide Writers’ Week reading. We have some great books on offer, and here are some suggestions across a range of titles. All should be for sale now, and if you can’t find something, don’t worry, it will be available at the Book Tent in the Pioneer Women’s Memorial Garden.
The Royals

If you are a Royal watcher do not miss Julia Baird’s new biography of Queen Victoria – a fascinating and intimate account of the woman who became Queen. If you prefer the American royals, the Kennedy clan, grab a copy of Paula Byrne’s terrific Kick, which tells the story of JFK’s baby sister, a girl whose fairy tale ended too soon. Or perhaps have a read of Jesse Burton’s The Muse, which tells, in part, the story of a gifted heiress in Spain on the eve of the Spanish Civil War.

True Crime

With The Wicked Boy Kate Summerscale has written an atmospheric thriller based on facts. The book tells the true story of the 1895 murder of a mother by her sons near the docklands in East London. With her series of novels about the Kopp sisters, Amy Stewart has taken two historical figures and flung them into murder mysteries of her own invention. Or for something more contemporary, try Adrian McKinty’s Sean Duffy crime novels, set in the 1980s Northern Ireland of his childhood.

Histories

This year brings together a group of exceptional histories about the everyday and the unusual. Keith Houston’s The Book is a glorious history of the components that comprise the book – paper, ink, thread, glue and board. Alberto Manguel takes us on a brilliantly eclectic journey in Curiosity, a history of that age-old impulse that insists we find out why. And Richard Fidler takes us back to Constantinople in Ghost Empire, a riveting account of a legendary city, the end of empire and a father’s trip with his son.

The Cutting Edge

Writers’ Week is a place to discover writers and this year sees some of the finest in contemporary fiction, including Alejandro Zambra whose brilliantly clever Multiple Choice is an account of living under Pinochet, written as a multiple choice test. Or try Yuri Herrera’s The Transmigration of Bodies, a futuristic noir thriller written in response to contemporary Mexico’s problem with violence – think feuding families and a plague. For a real treat in short form fiction read Michelle Wright’s blistering stories in Fine, a collection about regret, doubt, and isolation in the everyday.
Over this past year Adelaide Writers’ Week has hosted a series of writer events around the city, featuring novelists, journalists, a philosopher, an advocate for autism, and one very charming surfer. These events are a way for us to raise money for the free event that runs each year in the Pioneer Women’s Memorial Garden. In the coming year we are delighted to be able to run this series again. To keep up to date with Adelaide Writers’ Week Special Events please sign up to our Festival Insider e-news at adelaidefestival.com.au/e-news

Let Them Eat

It is a real delight to be able to announce that from this year Adelaide Writers’ Week will see local caterer Let Them Eat and their wonderful wholefoods menu in our catering tent. Let Them Eat rely on local produce when crafting a huge range of delicacies for vegetarians and omnivores alike. This is good food that is fast and friendly and incredibly delicious.
New York Times best-selling author Amy Stewart is known for both her books on horticulture as well as on crime. She has taken experts and novices alike into her garden, be it with drunken botany, diabolical insects, wicked weeds – even earthworms. Join her for a lunch curated by chef Paul Baker in the Adelaide Botanic Gardens for a leisurely conversation about our botanical world.

et ready for two magical days of stories, parades, painting, printing, performances and lots of full on fun!

The Story Tent

This year our big red yurt will see some spectacular storytelling including The Underwater Fancy-Dress Parade, The Nose Pixies, The Very Hungry Bum as well as Wild Ideas and each is in its own way secretly educational.

Nest Studio

Under new blue sails Nest Studio will be publishing books and making posters and paintings. Drop by for a story or maybe a game and while you are here please help make the official Writers’ Week bookmarks.

Evelyn Roth’s Nylon Zoo

This year we will welcome a great green turtle and a softly spiky echidna from Evelyn Roth’s Nylon Zoo. Come along, grab a costume and parade your way around the garden.

You Are Stardust Mural

This year writer Elin Kelsey and illustrator Soyeon Kim invite you to work with them to create a giant mural based on their book You Are Stardust. With the help of some paper and string you’ll discover that we are all a part of the cosmos.

South of Darkness
John Marsden

John Marsden is an award-winning writer for both children and adults, as well as an educator. He is the author of the hugely successful Tomorrow series along with more than 40 other titles. He comes to the Festival with South of Darkness, a novel for adults, that tells the story of 13-year-old Barnaby, an English boy in the 1700s who decides that a better life awaits him in the colonies. He is just one crime away.

9.30am
East Stage

Fragrance
Kate Grenville

While on a book tour in 2015 Kate Grenville was dogged by ill-health. The culprit was eventually discovered to be artificial fragrance. Her new book, The Case Against Fragrance, is both a memoir and a fascinating exploration of the chemicals in perfumes, cosmetics, even cleansers. In a world increasingly besieged by scent, hers is an exploration of the implications of smell. Chair Kerryn Goldsworthy.

Kate Grenville's The Secret River is being presented as part of Adelaide Festival 2017.
10.45am West Stage

Invisible Mending

Mike Ladd

Poet and broadcaster Mike Ladd has recently published the collection Invisible Mending. A mash-up of poetry, essay, memoir and short story, the book takes up the idea of scarring and healing. As in his earlier work, Ladd explores themes of family connections, landscape and travel. His earlier collections include Karrawirra Parri: Walking the Torrens from Source to Sea. Join him in conversation with Nick Jose.

10.45am East Stage

Only

Caroline Baum

Caroline Baum returns to the festival with her memoir Only, a brilliant portrait of her own life as an only child with parents who were charismatic, damaged and displaced. Hers is an account of what it means to be a good daughter. It is also a love letter to Europe and the terrible legacies of war and exile. Join her in conversation with David Francis.

12.00pm West Stage

Gender Benders

Cordelia Fine

Cordelia Fine is an academic psychologist who writes about neuroscience and psychology. With Delusions of Gender she established herself as a great demystifier. Most recently Testosterone Rex: Unmaking the Myths of our Gendered Minds takes on “nature vs nurture”, wittily breaking through the mire of assumptions. This is a must see for anyone curious about brain science. Chair Farrin Foster.

12.00pm East Stage

Dedication

Elizabeth Harrower

It is not an exaggeration to call Elizabeth Harrower a titan of 20th century letters. She is the author of the novels Down in the City, The Long Prospect, The Catherine Wheel, The Watch Tower and In Certain Circles. Her work was first published in the early 1960s and by 1977 she had given up writing, but now her brilliant books are back again. Join her in conversation with Michael Heyward, the publisher who made it possible.

Nathan Hill

The Nix tells the story of Samuel Andresen-Anderson, a washed up writer whose mother disappeared when he was a child, only to reappear decades later in need of help after hurling a rock at a politician. At times fiercely funny, The Nix is a story about the force of family in politically turbulent times. This is a must see for anyone curious about the increasingly strange place that is the United States. Chair Steven Gale.

Wisdom Tree
Nick Earls

Nick Earls is one of Australia’s most fascinating fiction writers, who writes long and short form books for both adults and children. He comes to the Festival with a wonderful collection of novellas called Wisdom Tree. Each of the five books takes a city as its reference point, and each tells a story of work, family and failure. They are, collectively and individually, simply wonderful. Chair Kate de Goldi.

3.45pm

The Way to the Spring
Ben Ehrenreich

Ben Ehrenreich spent three years travelling to the West Bank and living with Palestinian families. The result is the utterly extraordinary The Way to the Spring: Life and Death in Palestine, a book that reflects the bravery of a people who live under occupation, but who continue to live. These are stories of ordinary people, told with huge empathy, eloquence and a quiet rage. Chair Jon Jureidini.

5.00pm
West Stage

True Girt
David Hunt

With Girt and True Girt, David Hunt has become the funny man of Australian history – which is not to say the books aren’t proper history. Together his award-winning books take readers from first contact to the Wild South to the death of Ned Kelly. The books are hilarious, insightful, unexpected and utterly fascinating. This session promises to be huge fun; to miss it would be un-Australian. Chair Peter Monteath.

5.00pm
East Stage

The Age of Jihad
Patrick Cockburn

Patrick Cockburn, a Middle East correspondent for more than two decades, was the first Western journalist to warn about the dangers of the Islamic State. Fifteen years after the US invasion of Afghanistan he brings us an important new book, The Age of Jihad. Join him for a conversation about the Sunni-Shia wars in Yemen, Libya, and Syria, as well as the Arab Spring.
True Crime?
Graeme Macrae Burnet
Hannah Kent

For Hannah Kent, mining little known histories has made for two insanely successful novels, Burial Rites and The Good People. For Graeme Macrae Burnet, creating an historical world has made for his best-selling novel His Bloody Project, one that tells the story of a brutal murder. Join these two writers for a lively conversation about the allure of murders from a past both real and imagined. Chair Victoria Purman.

The Last Hundred Years
Jane Smiley

Jane Smiley once set herself the task of writing fiction across every genre, including a trilogy. The Last Hundred Years: A Family Saga is just that. With these novels Smiley has returned to Iowa to tell the story of a family over three tumultuous generations. What is extraordinary is that each chapter covers a single year. Join this brilliant writer in conversation with David Francis, as she once again proves she can do anything.

Supported by the US Consulate
Wintering
Peter Geye

Peter Geye’s novel Wintering follows on from its predecessor The Lighthouse Road, which introduces a fractured family through a young Norwegian woman and her bastard child born of a rape. Set in the wilds of Minnesota these novels tell the story of fathers, former spouses and their sons living in the wilderness that shapes them. These wonderful books are about lost loves, revenge, and small town secrets. Chair Kate de Goldi.

The German Girl
Armando Lucas Correa

Celebrated Cuban journalist Armando Lucas Correa has recently published his first novel, The German Girl. The novel tells the real-life story of a group of Jewish refugees who set sail from Berlin in the hopes of finding refuge in Cuba. By the time the boat arrives all but a handful were turned away. Told by the young refugee and her great niece, the novel elegantly recovers a lost story. Chair Steven Gale.

American Dreaming
Adam Fitzgerald

Poet Adam Fitzgerald’s George Washington is a collection that takes us to New Jersey and the popular culture of the 1990s. Nathan Hill’s novel The Nix tells the story of a young man looking back to the 1960s. Both books wrangle with culture, loss, love, and resilience in the face of change. These books are wry, clever and insightful, and a must for anyone who ever owned a VHS. Chair Michael Williams.

Curiosity
Alberto Manguel

Novelist, editor, translator and essayist Alberto Manguel is among the most celebrated of our contemporary thinkers. He has written widely on books and reading, and comes to the Festival with a history of curiosity. In each chapter Manguel has selected a writer or thinker who found a new way to ask the question - why? Intimate and eloquent, Manguel celebrates the very human desire to know. Chair Cath Kenneally.

Small Towns
Cassandra Austin
Holly Throsby

Small towns are never what they appear; there is always something dodgy going on and this session brings together the creators of two Australian towns. In Cassandra Austin’s All Fall Down, a bridge collapses and a young girl is punished with a trip to live with her uncle. In Holly Throsby’s Goodwood, a beautiful young woman disappears along with the butcher. Wonderfully imagined, these small towns will leave you guessing.

1.15pm East Stage

The Sadness of History
Krys Lee
A S Patric

This session brings together two novelists exploring the realities of displaced peoples. Krys Lee’s How I Became A North Korean tells the story of two young defectors and a young American Korean boy fighting to stay alive in a border town in China. A S Patric’s Miles Franklin Award-winning Black Rock White City follows a bereaved couple who, having escaped from wartorn Yugoslavia, find themselves living a muted life in Melbourne. Chair Jo Case.

2.30pm West Stage

Ordinary People
Nick Earls
Michelle Wright

So much of life is made up of enduring quiet disappointments. Michelle Wright’s remarkable collection of stories, Fine, captures the complex and often painful moments that define us. Nick Earls’ novellas, Wisdom Tree, explore the relationships that shape us, be they familial or not. Join these two gifted writers for a conversation about the expansive possibilities of fiction’s short forms. Chair Kerryn Goldsworthy.

2.30pm East Stage

Just Wicked
Amy Stewart
Kate Summerscale

For Kate Summerscale true crime warrants true accounts of some of Victorian England’s most grisly murders. For Amy Stewart history is a launching pad, a place where real characters’ stories are imagined. In The Wicked Boy, Summerscale tells the story of a woman murdered by her sons. In the Kopp Sisters books, Stewart brings to life stroppy sisters solving crimes. Join them for a conversation about history and crime with Kate de Goldi.
3.45pm
West Stage

Wedding Bush Road
David Francis

A young lawyer returns to the family farm only to discover his mother in poor health, his father off the property, and his father’s former mistress alone with her son in a small cabin. Celebrated novelist David Francis’ new novel, Wedding Bush Road, presents a haunting portrait of an Australian family, and the treacheries of landscape, memory and legacy. Join him in conversation with Caroline Baum.

Hard Boiled
Adrian McKinty
Ben Sanders

In the tradition of Raymond Chandler and James Ellroy, Adrian McKinty and Ben Sanders take up the noble tradition of hard-boiled crime. With his character Sean Duffy, McKinty takes us back to Belfast in the 1980s. With Marshall Grade, Ben Sanders has created an ex-cop negotiating the dark underbelly of the American Southwest. Join them in conversation with Steven Gale.

5.00pm

Impossible Journeys
Kooshyar Karimi

In I Confess and Leila’s Secret, physician, translator and writer Kooshyar Karimi has explored his experiences as a refugee and a doctor in Iran. With his new memoir, Journey of a Thousand Storms, Karimi takes us back to Tehran, to the time when he was kidnapped, jailed, tortured and forced to spy for the regime he opposed. His is a harrowing story, one of great bravery and compassion. Chair Jon Jureidini.

5.00pm
East Stage

Listen, Liberal
Thomas Frank

American journalist, historian and political analyst Thomas Frank comes to Adelaide with Listen, Liberal, a sobering account of the failures of the American Left, and in particular how the Democratic Party failed to address income inequality. This failure saw itself played out in Brexit and the US election. Smart, timely and somehow entertaining, Frank is a voice trying to make sense of an increasingly disgruntled world. Chair Tory Shepherd.

The Muse

Jessie Burton

The author of the best-seller The Miniaturist returns with The Muse, a novel that tells the story of two women: a Caribbean immigrant living in 1960s London and a bohemian in 1930s Spain. At the heart of the novel is a painting with a secret history, rediscovered by chance. The story that surrounds the painting is one of desire, ambition, and the heavy hand of history. Chair Michael Cathcart.
With the publication of his debut collection, The Late Parade, Adam Fitzgerald was heralded as an important new poet. His second volume, George Washington, cements this reputation. In this new book Fitzgerald re-thinks American myths from the founding fathers to Darth Vader. He is concerned with memory, loss and the ever-presence of commercial culture. Join him in conversation with Mike Ladd.

Kate Summerscale has won every major award for her non-fiction, including the Samuel Johnson Prize for The Suspicions of Mr Whicher. Most recently she has published The Wicked Boy, a gripping account of the murder of a woman in Victorian England by her young sons. Summerscale’s account is both an examination of the crime and a morality tale that sees a young man trying to overcome his past. Chair Susan Wyndham.

There are few things more enjoyable than reading books about books and reading. This session brings together one of the great writers about reading, Alberto Manguel, with one of the great writers about book history, Keith Houston. It will be a celebration of the object that perhaps most defines our lives and can define the way we live, as both an object and an idea.

Alberto Manguel supported by the Canada Council for the Arts

From the beginning, Sebastian Barry has taken inspiration from family stories, including his recent novel Days Without End, which draws on the story of a great-uncle who fought in the Indian Wars. Jane Smiley has with her Last Hundred Years trilogy written an account of a family for every year of a century. Join these two writers for a conversation about mining the past. Chair Chris Flynn.

Sebastian Barry supported by Culture Ireland. Jane Smiley supported by the US Consulate
Celebrated poet Adam Aitken has recently published a remarkable memoir, One Hundred Letters Home. This memoir uses photographs, conversations and letters to create a narrative of Aitken’s parents’ marriage; a portrait of his father and an account of his own journey from Australia back to his mother’s Thailand. Aitken is an elegant writer and his book is a richly engaging exploration of identity. Chair Mike Ladd.

In The Dead Ladies Project, Bookslut creator Jessa Crispin chronicles a journey she took through Europe and an exploration of exile through the writings of the dead. In The Art of Rivalry, Pulitzer-prize winning art critic Sebastian Smee tells the stories of the tempestuous relationships between artists and considers the nature of creativity. Join these two critics for a conversation about art and life. Chair Michael Williams.

The Rules of Backyard Cricket opens with Darren Keefe in the boot of a car, gagged, shot and hog-tied. Like his brother, Darren Keefe plays cricket, only unlike his brother he can’t seem to keep away from trouble. His is a story of sport, celebrity and one determined woman making a life for her sons. The novel is also the new thriller from the author of Ned Kelly winner Quota. Chair Kate de Goldi.

Madeleine Thien returns to Adelaide with her multi-award-winning novel Do Not Say We Have Nothing. Set in both contemporary Canada and Revolutionary China, the novel tells the story of three gifted musicians and their families. Thien’s novel is a powerful evocation of an era and a richly imagined account of those who survived and endured. Chair Steven Gale.

Supported by Canada Council of the Arts and Canadian Embassy Canberra
Originally published by a small Scottish publisher, His Bloody Project became one of the year’s most celebrated novels. Set in a remote village in the 19th century, the novel is told through testimonials, including that by a 17-year-old crofter awaiting trial for three bloody murders. Its author Graeme Macrae Burnet has created an insanely clever novel that alleges to be true crime and is a darkly funny look at madness. Chair Chris Flynn.

Peter Ho Davies is an award-winning novelist and short story writer. His collections include The Ugliest House in the World, Equal Love and the novels The Welsh Girl and most recently The Fortunes. With this brilliant book Davies asks what it means to be Chinese-American. Told in four parts, the novel uses historical figures to tell a story that reaches into the 19th century and ends in the present. Chair Angela Meyer.

There is perhaps no issue more vexatious here in Australia than the treatment of refugees. This session brings together distinguished lawyer and scholar William Maley, author of What is a Refugee? and Adele Dumont, author of No Man is an Island, an account of her time spent teaching on Christmas Island. Join them as they consider the urgent issue of what it means to seek a safe haven. Chair Peter Mares.

The Book
Keith Houston

Keith Houston’s fascination with punctuation and typography resulted in both a wonderful blog and book, Shady Characters. Houston’s history of typography reaches back two millennia to the library at Alexandria and carries on until today. More recently he has published The Book, a beautiful object that is both a history of the book and homage to the most powerful object of our time. Join him in conversation with Michael Williams.

Days Without End
Sebastian Barry

Poet, novelist and playwright, Sebastian Barry is one of our finest writers. Barry comes to Adelaide with the new novel, Days Without End. The novel tells the story of Thomas McNulty, who having fled the Great Famine in Ireland joins the US Army in the 1850s. With his companion John Cole, Thomas fights in both the Indian and Civil Wars. Hauntingly brutal and atmospheric, theirs is a story of love and war. Chair Susan Wyndham.

Supported by Culture Ireland
Poet, art critic, editor and publisher, Ken Bolton is one of Australia’s most important poets. His recent collections include A Whistled Bit of Bop, Sly Mongoose, and The Circus, among others. Bolton’s poetry is an often laconic and discursive mix of observations about his life and musings on the larger issues surrounding contemporary art, culture and society. Chair Mike Ladd.

With Victoria: The Woman Who Made the Modern World journalist, broadcaster and historian Julia Baird has written a brilliant biography of a real woman who became a great ruler. An absolute page-turner, her Victoria is playful, powerful, passionate, and often misrepresented, in no small part because her daughter burned her diaries. Drawing on Queen Victoria’s unpublished papers, Baird has returned a Queen to her throne. Chair Caroline Baum.

In his novel Beauty is a Wound Eka Kurniawan tells the story of Indonesia from the Second World War until the present through the life of a sex worker. In Do Not Say We Have Nothing, Madeleine Thien uses a family’s story to take readers from the Cultural Revolution to Tiananmen Square. In The Fortunes Peter Ho Davies takes four real Chinese immigrants to the US and re-imagines their lives. Chair Jo Case.

Creator of the online literary magazine Bookslut, Jessa Crispin is the author of The Dead Ladies Project, a brilliant book about the journey she made travelling in Europe following in the wake of writers she admired. Her most recent book is Why I Am Not a Feminist: A Feminist Manifesto, an utterly fearless attack on the feminist movement and a call for a radical revolution. Join her in conversation with Laura Kroetsch.
The Border
Yuri Herrera
Krys Lee

In Yuri Herrera’s novel Signs Preceding the End of the World, a young Mexican woman is sent over the border into the US in search of her brother. Krys Lee’s novel How I Became A North Korean tells the story of two young dissidents who find themselves stranded on the Chinese side of the Korean border. Join them for a conversation about the twilight worlds of border crossing with Rebekah Clarkson.

Yuri Herrera supported by the Mexican Consulate, Canberra

On Grief
Emily Maguire
A S Patric

In Emily Maguire’s An Isolated Incident, a woman loses her sister to a brutal murder. In A S Patric’s Black Rock White City an immigrant couple settle in Australia after losing their two young children in a refugee camp. In both novels the characters are negotiating loss and its aftermath, trying to make sense of human cruelty. Join them for a conversation about dark places with Angela Meyer.

My Documents
Alejandro Zambra

Alejandro Zambra is one of the superstars of contemporary fiction. The Chilean novelist and short story writer has most recently seen the story collection My Documents and the novel Multiple Choice translated into English. Zambra’s writing is wonderfully clever, as he plays with identity, memory, form and the line between fiction and personal history. Join this gifted writer in conversation with Geordie Williamson.

Heroes
Ben Ehrenreich
Mei Fong

These are the stories not told on the six o’clock news: the stories of those who dwell in dangerous places. In The Way to the Spring Ben Ehrenreich explores the lives of Palestinians living in the West Bank. In One Child Mei Fong talks to those whose lives have been shaped by China’s One Child policy. Join these two journalists for a conversation about why these stories matter. Chair Peter Mares.

The Coppers
Adrian McKinty
Peter Robinson

Adrian McKinty’s character Sean Duffy is a Catholic cop in a Protestant station in Northern Ireland. Peter Robinson’s DCI Banks is a working class cop in a tiny town outside London. Duffy’s is the rougher world, more violent, more political. Banks’ is a more bucolic world, which doesn’t mean the bodies aren’t piling up. Join these two masters of the form for a conversation about creating cops and criminals and music with chair Victoria Purman.

Syria
Patrick Cockburn
Janine di Giovanni

There is arguably no place as little understood as Syria. This session brings together two journalists who have covered the Middle East for decades. Patrick Cockburn covers the conflict for The Independent and has recently published The Rise of Islamic State. Janine di Giovanni is the Middle East Editor of Newsweek and the author of The Morning They Came for Us, an account of the civilians trapped by the war. Chair Peter Cave.

Marshall’s Law
Ben Sanders

From New Zealand Ben Sanders has become a big name in American crime. He is the creator of Marshall Grade, a former undercover cop now reluctantly in witness protection. Marshall first appears in American Blood, a hardscrabble journey through the drug trade. In Marshall’s Law, he is on the run from a nonchalant psychopath and an old enemy.

The Hero Maker
Stephen Dando-Collins

Novelist, historian and biographer Stephen Dando-Collins comes to Adelaide with his recent biography of Paul Brickhill, The Hero Maker. Brickhill was the author of the bestselling war dramas, The Dam Busters and The Great Escape. And his life was much like his fiction – flying Spitfires, getting shot down, great escapes and lots of parties. His story had a sad end, but as Dando-Collins makes clear – it makes for a great story. Chair David Sly.

The Biographers

Julia Baird
Paula Byrne

With her recent biography Victoria, Julia Baird has uncovered new material and a new perspective as she reveals a Queen who is also a mother, a wife, a daughter and a leader. In Kick, Paula Byrne recovers the story of JFK’s baby sister, the glamour girl who found herself in England at the onset of war. Join them for a conversation about research, writing and rediscovering fascinating women, with Sarah Tooth.
A 19th century whaling ship sets out for the Arctic, carrying the harpooner Henry Drax, a nasty drunk who is extremely violent. The ship’s surgeon is the disgraced Patrick Summer just returned from India. In the cold dark of the Arctic, shadowy motives begin to appear as the men battle themselves and an increasingly hostile landscape. Join Ian McGuire for a conversation about his darkly brilliant novel The North Water. Chair Chris Flynn.

Set on a group of small islands off the coast of Virginia, The Shore, Sara Taylor’s debut novel, is Southern Gothic at its very best: abandoned babies, a drug-addled Daddy, wild ponies, witchcraft, murder, and a half-formed man. Her follow-up, The Lauras, is an unexpected road trip, one that sees a mother on her way back into the past, travelling with a child on the verge of becoming an adult. Join her for a conversation about America’s unexpected places with Kerryn Goldsworthy.

South Australia has always shaped its own destiny with large doses of vision and optimism. This spirit is needed now more than ever, as the state teeters on the brink of a severe jobs crisis. Contributors to Griffith Review: State of Hope, Patrick Allington, Amrita Malhi and Tory Shepherd, join co-editor Julianne Schulz to draw on South Australia’s rich history of reform and innovation and outline possible futures.

Lindy West is an online sensation, a celebrated broadcaster and a gifted writer. She is the author of Shrrl, a brilliantly funny collection of essays on gender politics, including – abortion, rape, weight, Internet trolling and accidental activism. She fearlessly writes about her own life, as a shy child and as an adult doing battle with stand-up comedians. Her book is intimate, insightful, very funny and chockers with useful advice. Chair Emily Maguire.

The Transmigration of Bodies
Yuri Herrera

Yuri Herrera is one of the most exciting voices in contemporary literature. His insanely clever novels include The Transmigration of Bodies, a brilliantly brutal story about a plague bringing death to a city held hostage by two crime families. In Signs Preceding the End of the World, he writes a lyrical story about a young Mexican woman sent across the US border in search of her brother. Join him in conversation with Michael Cathcart.

One Child
Mei Fong

Pulitzer-prize winning journalist Mei Fong has written a fascinating account of China’s failed attempt at social engineering. In One Child Mei Fong documents the human impact as she travels across China meeting the people who live with the often-brutal consequences of three decades of social control. While the policy ended in October 2015, China and the world will live with its legacy for generations to come.

Chair Peter Cave.
Today there are more than a million temporary migrants living in Australia. In Not Quite Australian award-winning journalist Peter Mares explores the implications of this shift from a settler society to one which is much more complicated. Drawing on studies, interviews and personal stories Mares explores changes to every aspect of life here in Australia – from wage wars to healthcare to national identity. Join him in conversation with Joanna Howe.

Crime novelist Peter Robinson is best known for his creation DCI Banks, who most recently appears in Robinson’s When the Music’s Over. This time around Banks is working a 50-year-old cold case, one that features an abusive celebrity entertainer and a host of victims. At the same time a 14-year-old girl is found murdered, and everyone is hearing echoes of the earlier case. Chair Stephen Atkinson.

Thomas Frank’s recent book, Listen, Liberal, documents the failures of the Democratic Party in the US, and in particular how the party lost touch with working class people. No Way But This: In Search of Paul Robeson is Australian journalist Jeff Sparrow’s new book, an exploration of the career of the political activist, actor and singer as a way to reflect on the history of the Left. Join them in conversation with Sandy Verschoor.

With Slaughter Park, award-winning crime writer Barry Maitland has completed his Belltree Trilogy, which began with Crucifixion Creek and Ash Island. All featuring homicide detective Harry Belltree. Like its predecessors, this instalment relies on moral ambiguity and non-stop action as Harry looks into an elderly couple’s suicide pact and the stabbing death of his brother-in-law. Chair David Sly.
All at Sea
Decca Aitkenhead

While on holiday in Jamaica, Decca Aitkenhead’s husband Tony drowned while saving their young son. Her powerful memoir All At Sea is an account of that terrible day and the months that followed as she grieved his loss and cared for her young sons. It is also very much a book about Tony, a charismatic drug dealer and one-time crack addict who was the love of her life. Join this gifted writer in conversation.

Magical Places
Hannah Kent
Sara Taylor

Hannah Kent’s The Good People takes place in 19th century Ireland populated with those who trust in fairies and traditional healers. In Sara Taylor’s The Shore women appear as witches and healers both in the past and into the future. In both novels these traditional women’s worlds are viewed with suspicion and distrust. Both are seen as simple and dangerous by the incoming faiths, and their male advocates. Chair Sandy Verschoor.

With his biography Brett Whiteley, correspondent and critic Ashleigh Wilson has brought to life one of contemporary art’s most enigmatic figures. His is the story of a one-time bohemian, celebrated artist, addict, husband and friend. While researching the book Wilson had unprecedented access to the Whiteley archive and his wife, Wendy, and what emerges is an intimate portrait of the man and his art. Chair Sebastian Smee.

Celebrated Indonesian novelist Eka Kurniawan comes to Adelaide with Beauty is a Wound, an epic account of the beautiful sex worker Dewi Ayu and her four daughters as they negotiate incest, murder, insanity, and the vengeful un-dead. In contrast, Man Tiger is a slender novel that tells the story of two tormented families, a young man, Margio, and the supernatural white tiger that inhabits him. Chair Nick Jose.

Inga Simpson is the author of the novels Mr Wigg, Nest, and most recently Where the Trees Were. This new novel tells the story of Jayne, a girl who grew up on a farm and later becomes a museum curator. As the novel moves from past to present we discover that Jayne’s life is bound by the discovery of a copse of sacred trees. Richly imagined and deftly handled, this novel is a delight. Chair Rebekah Clarkson.

Giulia Enders’ Gut: The Inside Story of Our Body’s Most Underrated Organ is a revolutionary book – an informative and often entertaining tour of our digestive systems, from our lips to our bottoms. Drawing on cutting-edge science, Enders explains everything from the good bacteria for gut health to those associated with obesity, autoimmune disease, even suicide.
